EAST is a network for information exchange between its members, numbering almost 200 individuals and institutions who research migration and population ageing in Eastern European countries.

Research Area Overview

Although population ageing set in much later in Eastern Europe than in other parts of Europe, the demographic trends of the 1990s and 2000s (a dramatic drop in fertility, mass emigration of many younger people, and slow but continuous rise in life expectancy) lead to a much more rapid demographic ageing in the East than in Western or Northern Europe.

Many, if not all, Eastern European societies are ill-prepared for yet another dramatic societal transition, having not quite completed the previous one from socialism and planned economies to capitalism and free market economies.
